

The LECs operate an "essential facility", and YES they should be required to allow other ISP firms to purchase access from them. Overall, I believe this has helped competition and therefore consumers in the phone line /DSL market, and should be the same for cable companies.